

TO SHOW M. U. CATTLE AT FAIR

College of Agriculture Will Enter Eight Pure Breed Steers at Sedalia.

The College of Agriculture will show eight head of pure bred cattle, outside the dairy herd, at the State Fair at Sedalia, September 23 to 30. These cattle will be of three breeds, Hereford, Aberdeen-Angus and Gallo-way, and a crossbreed Shorthorn-Angus.

A 2-year-old, a yearling and a calf steer, all Herefords; a yearling Gallo-way steer; a cross-breed Shorthorn-Angus calf, and the 2-year-old Short-horn bull, College Knight, which is to be sold at the American Royal Short-horn sale in Kansas City on October 5, will be entered.

In the past the University has been very successful in show herds of beef cattle at the State Fair. The number of University cattle entered this year will not be large on account of a lack of funds and because of the high price of both cattle and feed. University officials say. The specimens that will be shown, however, will be choice representatives of their breeds.

CERES, CROP GOD, TO TOP MISSOURI'S NEW CAPITOL

The Missouri State Capitol Commission has decided to place a statue of Ceres, the god of crops, on top of the new capitol at Jefferson City, it was announced today. The figure will be ten feet high and cast in bronze. It will stand 296 feet above the ground.

The figure is very appropriate, W. L. Nelson, assistant secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, said yesterday morning, because Missouri is undoubtedly one of the leading agricultural states of the country.

"In total crop production we have attained the rank of fourth place among all the states. We are the most diversified in matter of crop production of all the states in the great Corn Belt," Secretary Nelson said.

"With 114 counties in the state we each year produce an average of $1,000,000 worth of corn to the country. In addition we grow an average of 25,000,000 bushels of wheat, and approximately the same amount of oats.

"In hay we rank very near the top. We surpass Kansas with all her alfalfa. All this is in addition to a score of minor crops, not the least of which is cotton. We produce annually approximately three times as much cotton as the entire state of Virginia, and we grow this in a dozen counties. Our cotton is of the finest quality, commands the highest price and is grown in a region where the boll weevil is unknown.

"In the southwestern section we grow such crops as flax, broom corn and English blue grass. In the northwestern part of the state we have the greatest bluegrass region in the United States, not excepting the famous Bluegrass region of Kentucky."

Secretary Nelson says he wishes to congratulate the commission on choosing this emblem for a state that is so supreme in crop production. Mr. Nelson thinks that agriculture does not always get fair mention, and he is glad that the commission has shown that it is thoroughly in touch with the greatest industry of the state—that of agriculture.

The adoption of the emblem is a recognition of the whole state, because all the people are interested in agriculture, either directly or indirectly, according to Mr. Nelson.

"I believe when such a step is taken it is the duty of those interested in agriculture to let it be known that they appreciate the recognition. There is not a state in the union for which the emblem would be more appropriate," Mr. Nelson said.

University Silo is Partly Filled.

The large University silo, having a capacity of 300 tons, was partly filled last week. From 25 to 40 per cent. of the nutritive value of corn is in the stalk, according to College of Agriculture authorities. This part of the corn plant will be saved by being put in the silo. In the silo this material becomes acid and serves the same purpose as green grass.
